Stamps for Social purposes. TELEGRAPH STAMPS. By the Telegraph Act, 1868, the Postmaster-General was empowered to acquire the telegraphs then existing in the United Kingdom, in order that they might be vested in the Post-office. By a further Act, passed in 1869, the exclusive right of conveying public telegraphic messages was conferred on the Postmaster-General, and a monopoly created in favour of the Post-office in regard to such messages, similar to that enjoyed by it in favour of letters. The Act of 1868 fixed the rate at 1s. for every message of 20 words, exclusive of the addresses of the sender and the recipient, with 3d. for every additional five words. These rates were defrayed by postage stamps affixed to the messages; but in 1875 it was determined to issue a special series of stamps for the exclusive use of the Department, so as to show more evidently that the accounts of these two branches of the postal service were kept distinct from each other. The special feature in these stamps is that they are all transverse oblong rectangles; whenever, therefore, they were printed on the paper manufactured for...
