Excerpt: . . . to aid his fellow-man; His brave heart to the right was ever true; Faithful to Christ throughout his lifes brief span, He did a lifes work, though his years were few. He bore the Temperance banner far and high; His name among Truths heroes will not die. Swift was the stroke to those who mourn his loss, And dark indeed the cloud around his home: In Gods strength only can they bear this cross, Till Death, the angel, shall to them say Come! Then in the land where all Gods children meet, His smile again their longing eyes shall greet. Oh, what a rapturous greeting on that shore Awaited him whose treasured ones were there! So many who had crossed the sea before, And in whose presence he a heaven could share. We can but mourn our loss: to him twas gain To...
